ORGANIZATION.

THE PROBLEM THAT HAS AGITATED WOMEN FOR MANY YEARS.

What Organization Has Done for Females—One Writer Says That It Is a Mistake for Women to Regard Men as Enemies—Men Have Helped Them.

The problem of organization is one which has agitated women who work ever since the sex has been regarded as a factor in industrial competition, and it is apparent, from the almost daily discussions of the subject, that it is no nearer solution than it was at its inception. The relative sides of the controversy, whether organization assists in the amelioration of the sex from the evil effects of prejudice, have many champions who argue the question of principle with much wisdom and enthusiasm. To a casual observer, or even one who is interested in the outcome of the agitation without taking part in it, the affirmative side of the proposition would seem to be the most logical and popular, and there are many evidences to substantiate this view.

It is scarcely ten years since organization was tried by industrial women, and an observer epitomizes the result in these words: "Organization has in the first place compelled the recognition of female workers as competitors by the males, who previously usurped the fields into which women have since ventured and succeeded; organization has demonstrated the capabilities of woman more than individual merit could have ever done; it has rendered women independent of the influence of men in the adjustment of labor and social difficulties and in the matter of compensation."

Taking this view of the matter, which, it may be explained, is advanced by a

Wisconsin lady who is much interested in the subject, it would seem that organization has not only done much to promote the advancement of women, but has in addition opened up a broad field for discussion as to the claims of women for recognition in other than an industrial sense. Our correspondent argues that "a woman who, in the face of the strong opposition of men engaged in similar industrial pursuits, succeeds in elevating herself by her own efforts to an equal plane with them, is certainly entitled to consideration as a factor in both the social and official spheres of life."

The argument is so logical and patent to the student of the social and industrial status of women that it needs no comment. The assumption, however, that men oppose the progress of women and in any way seek to retard their advancement and restrict their capacity as competitors is ungenerous and, in a large measure, will do much to inspire prejudice in men against women. The facts all tend the other way.

Men are not only not opposed to women as fellow workers, but would, if encouraged, do more to assist women in their struggle for supremacy than any other influence could possibly do. The developments of the agitation in the past few years have shown this. Working women have appealed to the national congress and to the legislative bodies of several states for recognition and have obtained it, purely through the assistance of men who realized the justice of the demands. Without the assistance of these men the recognition could never have been secured.

Further than this, women have found, when seeking to obtain the questionable benefits of organization achieved by men, that they had only to be sincere to secure the same. If men are once satisfied that female workers are sincere in their efforts to secure independence, and are willing to render all social positions subservient to the purpose, women will have no cause for accrediting antipathy to men, but on the other hand will precipitate the millennium of their ambitions much sooner than by working alone.

The natural conclusion to be deduced from these conditions is, that women shall combine their own (as yet disorganized and incomplete) interests with those of men. Organization under such circumstances will obtain for a woman what she wants. Men are to be made friends, not enemies. To obtain recognition from their admirably organized systems of industrial pursuits is as much of a triumph for working women as they will ever secure. This can be done by working with them, not against them.—A Club Woman in Jenness Miller Illustrated.

Do Men Like Prison Life?

I think, said a detective the other day, there must be a fascination about life in jail for certain men who have been in there for a little while seem to leave it with regret, and do not lose their interest in what goes on in prison for some time after they are released. Again and again I have noticed men who have been confined for a few months come back every day after their release and stand at the door, looking in. They had no friends in there, unless they made friends among the other prisoners, and they did not speak or wish to speak to any one. They leaned against the grated door and looked in, as if they wanted to come back.

I really think some of them become attached to the life, and one reason is that unless they are men of gentle feelings they do not feel the shame of their position as long as they are inside, but when they come out and meet other men they know they have the jail stain on them, and they imagine every one sees it. I have often watched them standing there by the door, and wondered what feeling it was that drew them back.—London Tit-Bits.

The Plot to Kill.

"George, dear," said the young wife as her husband was about to kiss her before going down town, "the dress-maker is coming today, and she will probably be here to dinner this evening."

"Then, darling," said the young husband, the glad light of revenge shining in his deep blue eyes, "have some of that buckberry pudding that your mother taught you to make. Make it with your own hands, dear, for," he went on, with a strange glitter in his eyes, "I want to make a dead sure thing of it."—Clook Review.

The Colored Lights in Roman Candles. In making Roman candles a cylindrical case is taken and packed with a lot of stars. At the bottom of the case they put some of the composition they put in rockets, and on top of each star is some more of it. By mixing certain chemicals green and red lights are produced. Green lights like those used in death scenes on the stage at the theater are made by mixing a great quantity of nitrate of barium with small quantities of sulphur, chlorate of potash, charcoal pulverized and arsenic.—New York Evening Sun.

Facts and Figures.

There are 197 publications and news agents in St. Louis, and, according to the official figures given by Mr. Jno. B. Harlow, Postmaster, all of these sent out, during the month of July, 198,829 pounds of second-class mail matter, which includes all newspapers and periodicals mailed from the office of publication. Of this total, THE ST. LOUIS HERALC mailed 25,138 pounds, or about one-third of all, which fact tells its own story as to the wonderful popularity and large circulation of the great Democratic Newspaper of the West and Southwest.
